Ivy's New Glasses

Ivy could not see the board at school very well. The eye doctor said she needed glasses. Ivy picked a purple pair, but she was worried. "What if the kids laugh at me?" she asked.

The next day, Ivy walked into class slowly. She kept her head down. Then her friend Sam looked at her. "Wow, I like your purple glasses!" he said. Two other kids said they liked them too.

At reading time, Ivy could see every word on the board. The letters were sharp and clear. Ivy smiled. She was glad she had tried something new. Her glasses helped her, and her friends were kind.
